Scope and Contents

The collection consists of the papers of Clayton Thomas Rand (1891-1971), author, columnist, speaker, and publisher of the Dixie Guide, Gulfport, Mississippi. Rand was born in Wisconsin, reared in Bond, Mississippi, and graduated from Mississippi A & M College (now Mississippi State University) in 1911 and from Harvard College in 1913. He operated newspapers in Neshoba, Kemper, and Tunica counties before moving in the mid-1920's to Gulfport, where he resided until his death. In addition to running the Dixie Guide, Rand wrote many columns, books, and pamphlets and made numerous speeches to organizations across the country. In 1936 he served as president of the National Editorial Association.

Included in the Rand papers are correspondence, financial records, manuscripts, clippings, printed material, and photographs. Much of the collection concerns Rand's speeches, columns, books, and pamphlets, many of which were political in nature. Among his targets were Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, John Kennedy's administration, and the federal government in general. Also reflected in the collection are Rand's associations with Mississippi politicians and his experiences with hurricanes on the Gulf Coast. Hurricanes in 1947 and 1969 severely damaged his home and destroyed many of his papers.

The collection has been arranged in ten series, with the divisions based primarily on document type. With the exception of the last two series, all folder titles in the collection have been listed. Clayton Rand's folder headings have been retained wherever appropriate.

1. CORRESPONDENCE: The correspondence files are approximately 17 cubic feet in size and date from 1918 to 1971, In addition to personal and political topics, the series concerns Rand's many speeches, books, and pamphlets. Arrangement is alphabetical by subject.
2. MANUSCRIPTS BY CLAYTON RAND: The series is approximately 8 cubic feet and is divided into two sections: manuscripts filed alphabetically by title or, in the case of untitled manuscripts, by topic; and dated speeches filed chronologically. The speeches date from 1924 to 1970. The topics vary widely, with examples being a school in Philadelphia, Rotary clubs, the Mississippi Gulf Coast, the New Deal, the press, and Rand's own conservative political philosophy.
3. MANUSCRIPTS NOT BY CLAYTON RAND: The series consists of six folders. Included are poetry, introductions of and articles about Rand, and miscellaneous manuscripts.
4. PRINTED MATERIAL: The series is composed primarily of pamphlets and brochures written and printed by Rand. In addition to Rand speeches, the series contains numerous brochures prepared for distribution by banks, utilities, and other companies. Also included are promotional fliers about Rand. The series consists of approximately 1.25 cubic feet.
5. CLIPPINGS: The clippings are arranged alphabetically by subject and occupy approximately 0.75 cubic foot. Many of the clippings concern Rand's activities.
6. FINANCIAL RECORDS: The financial records have been grouped into three sections: general records, 1919-1971; ledgers, 1942-1964; and tax records, 1933-1970. The size of the series is approximately 1.33 cubic feet.
7. MISCELLANEOUS: The series consists of three folders containing biographical information about Rand, his speech schedules, and Robert L. Smitley newsletters.
8. RESEARCH MATERIAL: Included are seven folders of material concerning miscellaneous topics.
9. PHOTOGRAPHS: The series consists of 7 cubic feet of photographs, many of which were apparently assembled for use in the Dixie Guide. Included are photographs of Clayton Rand.
10. MATS/ARTWORK: The series contains mats, artwork, and layouts for several of the items in Series 4 (Printed Material). The size is 1 cubic foot.

Biographical Information

Clayton Thomas Rand was born on May 25, 1891, in Onalaska, Wisconsin, to Artemus and Cora Shaul Rand. When he was seven, his family moved to the sawmilling town of Bond, Mississippi. Artemus Rand passed on his love of classical literature to his son and in 1907 Clayton Rand entered Mississippi A&M College. Rand sold peanuts on campus to pay his way but also found time to establish the first dramatic club at the college and edit The Reflector. He also won the state oratorical contest and used this to get a scholarship from Harvard University, graduating with another B.S. in 1913. He entered Harvard Law School in 1914 but left soon after to unsuccessfully pursue various business ventures in New England. He also married Mary Ella Smylie that year and they had one son, Clayton Thomas, Jr.

By the end of 1914 he was back in Mississippi, where he studied law in Jackson and passed the bar examination in 1918. He again became engaged in business, managing the Neshoba Land Company for a group of speculators of which he was one. Having failed to gain a forum in the local paper, the Neshoba Democrat in Philadelphia, Mississippi, he decided to buy it. Rand campaigned to bring electricity, modern plumbing, and good roads to his small town and to engender civic pride. He was successful in improving local conditions and a public library was established. But his crusades against corruption and the Ku Klux Klan alienated many. Undaunted, he took his campaign into neighboring Kemper County, establishing another weekly newspaper, the DeKalb Independent, there. So successful was he that he was approached to take over the struggling weekly in Tunica, which he gave to Turner Catledge to run. However, this last venture proved more difficult and he soon sold it.

With the promise of more economic opportunity on the Gulf Coast, Rand sold his other two papers and moved to Gulfport where he acquired the Dixie Press in 1925 and started the Dixie Guide. It was the first Mississippi paper to employ photographers, have an engraving plant and include pictures with its stories. Rand's continued crusades won him attention in the state and in 1925 he was elected president of the Mississippi Press Association. But it was during his almost half century in Gulfport that he developed a national reputation. His column 'Crossroads Scribe' was syndicated to newspapers across the country and he won two national editorial awards. In 1930 he was elected to the board of directors of the National Press Association and in 1936 became its president. He also became a popular lecturer and after-dinner speaker.

While Rand may have been sympathetic to liberal ideas as a young man, he became increasingly conservative. In 1936 he published Abracadabra: Or, One Democrat to Another which was a scathing attack on Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal. Rand was not only critical of government interference with private enterprise but also of America's intelligentsia and immigrants. He would write four more books and many pamphlets, including Ink on My Hands and Men of Spine in Mississippi (1940), Stars in Their Eyes: Dreamers and Builders in Louisiana (1953); and Sons of the South: Portraits by Dalton Shourds, Harry Coughlin, and Constance Joan Noar (1961). Rand died on February 26, 1971.
